Transformative justice and security beyond police and the justice system, community accountability, queer feminism, anti-racism, power of definition and self-defence, critical reflections on masculinity, mechanisms of inclusion and exclusion within safeR spaces...

Antisexist awareness work and the declarations of self-organized, radical left-wing spaces contain a multitude of arguments, reflections and the desire to position oneself, to act and to decisively oppose injuring behaviour. But how exactly?

For three years now, our working group has developed an awareness concept and taken care of its practical implementation at Solipartys in New Yorck in Bethanien. During this time we have learned a lot, but questions and uncertainties have also arisen. We believe that many people feel the same way. Our impression is that there is a great need for awareness concepts, exchanges of experience and joint discussions.

We understand awareness as an important political, (queer)feminist practice and would like to see a larger discussion on how to create safer spaces. Spaces, in which we try to break away from existing social relations, spaces in which we learn other ways to resolve conflicts and where those affected by discrimination can feel more safe and comfortable.
